WHEN Vassili Grossman published his novel "The Right Cause" (For the Right Cause) last autumn most Soviet critics hailed it as the literary event of the year, and some said that it was comparable only to Tolstoy's "War and Peace." This was, to be sure, an utterly unwarranted exaggeration: like so many Soviet novels, the beginning was very promising, but soon the plot was lost in a mass of elaborate descriptions of events and personalities without a central theme to hold it together, and interest petered out. Last week Grossman was again in the news: after the initial praise, his novel had come in for severe criticism in "Pravda." Who, the paper indignantly asked, was responsible for the why nation of this harmful book containing such serious ideological mistakes and deviations?

SINCE reading Grossman's novel dealing with the year of Stalin's death, this correspondent has been expecting the attack because the Soviet-Jewish writer had indeed committed three or four major political mistakes in his description of the life of the Soviet intelligentsia. The first, and most serious mistake was the anti-Nazi character of the book: what is wrong with the Germans in 1937? They have become Russia's most important potential ally in Europe, and literary production must obviously be coordinated with the party line. What are needed now, are books discrediting the British and Americans, not the Germans. His second major mistake was to introduce two Jews in his novel, Sofia Levontin, an army physician, and Prof. Sturm, a scientist, who are both described as honest Soviet patriots! It can be argued that Grossman could not possibly know about the Prague trial and the affair of the Moscow doctors in the autumn of 1937, but he should have realized that no Jew had appeared in a positive role in any Soviet novel or play since 1920. Why should he, a Jew, run the risk of openly disregarding what had obviously become the party line in literature? Grossman's book moreover was not written in accordance with the elementary principle of Socialist realism, that is, of describing things and people not as they are, but as they should be. This was a particularly dangerous liberal deviation by someone who had already come in for sharp criticism for his play "The Pythagoreans" in 1946, where he alleged that Russia had remained largely unchanged.

EVEN more interesting than the mere fact of the political attack which has been launched against Grossman (and which is itself a pointed enough) is the personality of the writer who has been commissioned to open the campaign. He is Mikhail Rubynov, a member of the war generation who has become prominent only recently and for two reasons: one is the Stalin Prize he was awarded for his book "The White Birch," and the other, that the second part of his book, published in 1952, contains the sharpest anti-Semitic attack to appear in the Soviet Union since the salvoes of the cruiser "Aurora" heralded the revolution in Petrograd. U.K. May Reinforce Garrison in Jordan

By Pamela Matthews, Reuters' Diplomatic Correspondent

LONDON, Saturday. — The British and Jordan Governments are discussing a proposal to reinforce British troops stationed on Jordan territory in face of mounting tension with Israel, it is believed in usually well informed quarters here.

3 Infiltrators Killed In Central Negev

Israel security forces patrolling the central Negev on Wednesday night came across a party of armed infiltrators, the Army spokesman announced in Tel Aviv on Friday.

Shots were exchanged and as a result three infiltrators were killed and one arrested. A complaint will be lodged with the Israeli-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission.

Jordan Claim

"A-Diffa," the Old City daily, reported yesterday that an Israeli soldier was killed 300 metres inside Jordan territory on Thursday afternoon. His body, left on the scene of the clash, was reportedly seen by U.N. observers yesterday. The clash occurred between a group of 15 Israeli soldiers, who had entered Jordan near Naba village, south of Hebron, and Arab shepherds and National Guardsmen. "A-Diffa" said Jordan has lodged a protest and a demand for an emergency session of the M.A.C.

Persia Studies New U.S. Proposal on Oil

TEHRAN, Saturday. — The U.S. has offered to purchase Iranian oil if Iran accepts the Anglo-American proposals for settling the questions of compensation to the A.I.O.C. Foreign Minister Hassan, Fattahi told a press conference today. Fattahi revealed that Ambassador Loy Henderson had on Friday handed over three notes to Mossadegh: one a new British proposal on compensation; the second an American proposal which, Fattahi said, differed slightly from the British, and the third an American note proposing to buy Iranian oil in case the compensation issue is settled.

Mossadegh's principal adviser said today that the new proposals were not as good as the earlier ones but still not all they could be. Official sources said that the Premier would deliver counter-proposals within the next few days. (A.P.U.P.)

U.S. Congress Given Yalta Pact Motion

WASHINGTON, Saturday (U.P.). — President Dwight Eisenhower asked Congress yesterday to join him in repudiating any "interpretations or applications" of any agreements made with Marshal Stalin by President Roosevelt or President Truman which have led to "enslavement of free peoples." He also called on Congress to declare its "hope" that any peoples subjected to "Soviet despotism" shall "again enjoy the right of self-determination within a framework which will sustain peace."

Bundesrat Gives Unanimous Vote For Reparations

BONN, Saturday. — The 715th Reparations agreement with Israel was unanimously approved by the Bundesrat (Upper House) yesterday. The House also approved the agreement to pay $107m. to various Jewish world organizations on behalf of Jews living outside Israel.

The German Premier, Konrad Adenauer, in introducing the Bill, said that the provisions forbidding German ships to anchor in Israeli harbours were "discriminatory and inapplicable," and approval came only after the Foreign Minister, Walter Hallstein, assured the House that the Government would do all in its power to amend this clause of the agreement. "The regulation in the treaty was viewed by the Federal Government, with the full approval of the treaty partner, as a temporary solution only," Hallstein said. "The Federal Government will promptly, and before the ratification of the treaty, take up negotiations with Israel with the aim of arranging for ships flying German flags to enter Israeli harbours. The Government has reason to believe that these negotiations will bring about the hoped-for results," Hallstein added.

Bundesrat Next

The agreement must now go before the Bundestag (Lower House). Under the agreement West Germany promises to deliver to Israel 5,000m. marks of goods (including oil and steel) over 14 years as partial compensation for Nazi crimes against the Jews. The Bundestag will probably approve the agreement tomorrow, but unless the Government secures the amendment of the shipping clause, then, even among the Socialist opposition, which, until now, has been solidly pro-Israel, a one Bundestag member commented, "After all, German ships no longer fly the German flag." The Bundestag also approved a law providing for a 5,000m. mark internal restitution programme for Jews over the next five years. Only five delegates, representing West-Germany, voted against the law which still requires House approval. (Reuters, U.P.)

W. Germany to Advise On Nile Projects

BONN, Saturday (Reuters). — The West German Government will soon send a delegation to Egypt to study a great Nile irrigation project which the Cairo Government would like to see at least partly financed with German capital. This decision was taken by the Cabinet yesterday. The Egyptians are particularly interested in the construction of a new dam at Assuan. The project is to be carried out jointly by Egypt and West Germany. Its principles were discussed at the Egyptian Government by the German trade delegation which recently returned from Cairo. By participating in projects of this kind, the West German Government hoped to ward off the threatened trade boycott by the Arab League after ratification of the reparations agreement with Israel, a Government spokesman said.

TEL AVIV, Saturday. — Russia cannot solve the Jewish question, Mr. Yigal Allon, former Palmach commander, said here last night, and added that there was no anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. The only solution was for Jews to emigrate to Israel, he said. He was speaking at a public meeting of "Young Mapam" which is to take the place of the former organization which went over to Dr. Moshe Shertok's "Left Faction."

Kades Stops at Cyprus To Pick Up Passengers

POST Correspondent NICOSIA, Saturday. — The s.s. Kades en route from Haifa to Istanbul with members of the former Soviet Legation, at Tel Aviv anchored off Larnaca this afternoon to pick up passengers bound for Turkey. Communists tried to board the ship to greet Mr. P. I. Yershov, the former Minister, but were not permitted to do so by the authorities. Five members of the Legation party came ashore for a short time with diplomatic passports, but insisted on remaining incognito. The ship sailed later today, and is expected to reach Istanbul on March 1.

A.P. reports from Istanbul that the Soviet mission paid $400 to delay the departure of the Kades for one day.

The Maritime Bank of Turkey, which operates the Kades, told A.P. that the Russians paid another $1,000 for the passages of the party to Istanbul.

Last Act of the 'Cherry Orchard' Enacted as Diplomats Depart

TEL AVIV, Saturday. — The Soviet Union flag was lowered from the roof of the U.S.S.R. legation building in Rothschild Boulevard here two minutes before 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and at 2 o'clock precisely the former Minister Mr. Pavel I. Yershov, accompanied by his wife and daughter, the First Secretary, Mr. Abraham G. Abramov, and the Second Secretary, Mr. Nicolai P. Rayevski, drove off in the legation's Soviet-made Zis car, driven by Mr. Ivan Grishin, who was slightly injured in last week's bombing. Dr. M. Simon, Chief of Protocol, and Mr. Ya'acov Naach, head of the Foreign Planning Department, followed behind in a Foreign Ministry car.

Most other members of the legation staff had left the building an hour before for the Russian Church in Abu Kheir where they waited for the convey to start for Haifa. The diplomatic and service passports were handed back to Mr. Rayevski at 1.50 yesterday morning. His staff vans had been stamped in them. The passports were returned by Mr. A. Saikat, of the Protocol Division of the Foreign Ministry. During the hour before the departure time Tel Aviv representatives of all the countries of the Eastern Bloc called at the legation to accompany the outgoing Minister to Haifa. The Soviet driver spent the hour polishing the already-bright car which flew a small Soviet flag from its mudguard. Throughout the morning, crowds gathered in the boulevard outside the building. They were repeatedly dispersed by police. From photographers had waited outside the building all night and throughout the morning, expecting that the Legation might be evacuated quietly during the night.

Prowler Detained

A man who was growing around the Legation early in the morning and reportedly refused to obey the guards' orders to move away was detained. He is Dov Peleg, 22, an employee of the Asaf Herga hospital. Callers during the morning included Mr. Moshe Ezer and Mr. Haim Rubin, Mapam Knesset Members.

At noon the border police were reinforced and no member of the public was allowed to stand near the building. An hour later most of the Legation staff, including wives and children of some of the members, left the building carrying suitcases and brown paper packages and entered a number of waiting vehicles which took them to Abu Kheir.

The ship was scheduled to sail from Haifa at 4 p.m. on Thursday, but its owners agreed to delay her for the 31 Soviet staff members and 15 children whose departure was timed to coincide with that of the Israel Minister to the U.S.S.R., crossing the Soviet frontier into Finland.

The Russians reached Haifa port at 5.10 yesterday afternoon in a convoy of private cars, a Magen David Adom ambulance, a bus and a police escort. They were accompanied by Dr. M. Simon, Chief of Protocol, and a Foreign Ministry official. Members of the legations of Eastern Bloc countries came from Tel Aviv to see them off.

A police vessel patrolled the Kades's berth at the cargo jetty, which was fenced off. A strong police guard was posted at the approaches to the Port. A Soviet security agent in mufti kept watch in Haifa port from a boat on the water.

"Everything has already been said," was Mr. Yershov's reply to questions.

On arrival at the quayside, Mme. Anna Susayeva, the legation housekeeper, badly hurt in the bomb explosion on February 2, was carried aboard. Among those who had come to say goodbye to the Russians on the quayside were nearly all Mapam Knesset members. The Communist leaders turned up in force, all carrying bouquets. Dr. M. Simon, Mr. Ya'acov Naach, and Mr. Y. Herman, also boarded the ship to bid the Russians farewell.

Mr. and Mrs. Yershov and their child were the first to walk up the gangplank. They were followed by the staff in order of rank. The Russians were well-dressed, some to the point of elegance. When the ship was about to leave, Mr. Yershov, after his arrival, the only Russian-made legation car was hoisted up on deck.

The Eastern Bloc diplomats then returned to Tel Aviv, most of them in American cars.

of waiting vehicles which took them to Abu Kheir.

Some alighted at the police guard and waiting journalists, but only Mr. Dimitry Koblev, the Tam correspondent in Israel who also returned, said goodbye to anyone. He approached the group of newsmen on the pavement, offered round Russian cigarettes, and wished them luck and "fruitful work in the profession."

The wife of a staff member who gave birth a week ago carried her baby wrapped in blankets. She had been taken from the hospital to Abu Kheir. Among those who entered the building to say goodbye to the Minister just before he left was Archimandrite Polikarp, accompanied by two Greek Orthodox nuns.

At 1.43 Dr. Simon entered the building, while his car, with Mr. Naach waiting in the car, left the building. The Soviet Legation car, a few minutes later the Eastern Bloc diplomats entered the car, which stood waiting for the convey to move off. A few minutes before 2 o'clock the Legation driver took down the brass name-plate from the door (all names except one had already been removed), and Mr. and Mrs. Yershov, Mr. Abramov and Mr. Rayevski, left the building. Mr. Yershov took her seat in the car next to the driver.

Abducted Orphans Found in Spain

BAYONNE, Saturday (Reuters). — Two prominent Catholic priests and a businessman were charged here today with complicity in smuggling the two missing Jewish orphans, Robert and Gerald Finally, into Spain on February 13. There he put them in the hands of another Basque, Jean Suterreky, known as "El Chambo" who took them across the frontier along smugglers' paths to a farm near the village of Vera.

Etchebarak drove across the frontier the next day, picked the children up and took them to San Sebastian where they were placed in the care of a Spanish priest.

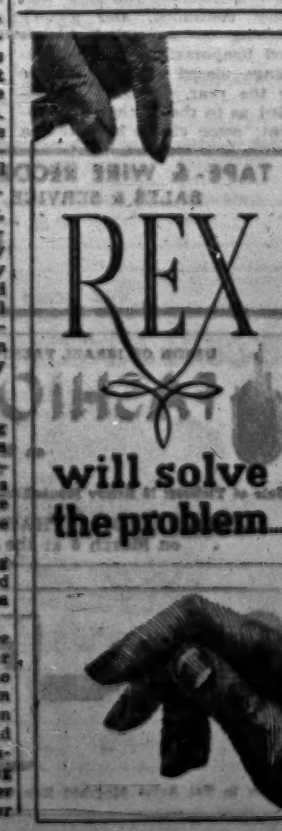

The boys whose Austrian-born parents were deported from Germany in 1938 by the Germans and subsequently died in Buchenwald were adopted by Augustin Brun, 52, who had them. After the war, he lost a leg and took the boys to a nearby town. Mr. Max Keller, their legal representative, was recovering a 120,000 franc sum and took them to either one of these towns.

The three men, who admitted helping in the abduction after long questioning yesterday, are Father Laxague, director and Professor of Theology at a Bayonne seminary, Father Arizart, chaplain of the Catholic youth organization in the Department, and Jean Fagilde, head of a chain of stores.

Police said the two priests, using Fagilde as an intermediary, handed the brothers over to a Basque, Francisco Etchebarak, who took them to the Pyrenean village of Rignat on the night of February 13. There he put them in the hands of another Basque, Jean Suterreky, known as "El Chambo" who took them across the frontier along smugglers' paths to a farm near the village of Vera.

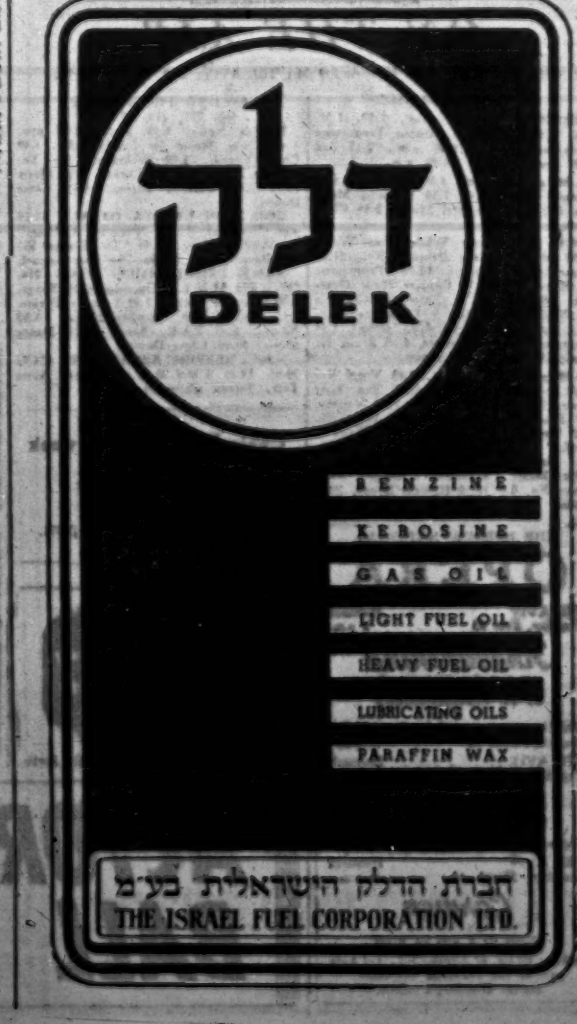

Etchebarak drove across the frontier the next day, picked the children up and took them to San Sebastian where they were placed in the care of a Spanish priest.
